The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction has long been famous for containing much of the best and most original writing in the field.
This, the ninth collection in book form of stories from the magazine,
is an excellent example of the startling and highly imaginative work now being produced.
Story subjects vary from the traditional hazards of space travel to the problems of a man who becomes, literally, his own father and mother;
but everything in this selection is inventive, surprising and adult.
